

Think Like a Third Year Introduction Transcript

Hi, my name is Emily, and I am an Academic Skills Advisor with UniSkills here at Edge Hill University.

This toolkit has been designed to support your transition into your third year of university study.

Having spent time in your first and second years developing your skills, you'll now be expected to work confidently with evidence, shape your own arguments, and make deliberate choices in your academic writing.

Your work should show not only what you know, but how you position yourself within your discipline. In other words, how you lead the academic conversation.

Third year also often brings larger, more complex assignments, such as dissertations and research projects. For most courses, this work plays a major role in your final degree classification.

This can feel demanding, but it's also your opportunity to demonstrate independence, critical thinking, and a strong academic voice.

And remember, UniSkills are always here to support you.

So, let's get started with exploring how to navigate this transition into third year.
